UK Outlook for Friday 9 Jul 2021 to Sunday 18 Jul 2021:
A settled regime will likely be in place across much of the country at the end of next week as drier and warmer weather develops from the west. However, there is the threat of some spells of rain and a few showers potentially crossing the northern half of the country. There is a lower chance of seeing more prolonged unsettled weather, mainly in the west. Towards the end of the period things are looking mostly fine and dry, though there remains a chance of isolated thunderstorms. Many areas are likely to see temperatures trending upwards through the period, with parts of the south potentially becoming very warm. Winds are looking to remain light across the UK for most of the period.
